

Just three exits south of downtown off Interstate-65 lies Crieve Hall, the quiet residential area with beautiful mature trees and landscaping on large lots.

The Neighborhood

The quiet residential area of Crieve Hall, just three exits south of Nashville, is bordered by Blackman Road to the north, Ellington Agricultural Center and Seven Mile Creek to the east, Interstate-65 to the west, and Hill Road to the south. Like most of Nashville's suburban areas, Crieve Hall offers easy access to all modern amenities including grocery stores, shopping, and movie theaters. If you're looking for a trendy spot, you'll be happy to know you're less than 15 minutes from anywhere in urban Nashville. The Crieve Hall neighborhood is full of picture-perfect scenes of mature trees, green lawns, and unique Music City charm.

The Market

Crieve Hall is a quintessential suburban neighborhood located just south of Nashville. One-story ranch homes on large lots tend to dominate these gently rolling hills. You'll find original 1950-era homes, many that have been updated to today's modern standards.

The Lifestyle

Crieve Hall's homes are well loved by home buyers and residents for their spacious yards, which are ideal for gardening, sitting in the sun, and enjoying the feeling of living in a suburban home without sacrificing the convenience. The area is surrounded by green spaces including Whitfield Park and the 207-acre Ellington Agriculture Complex, a public space popular for leisurely weekend strolls.
